

The map displays the distribution of 1968 and 1972 election results for the Democratic and Republican parties across the United States. The map shows county-level data with colored circles and numbers indicating the percentage of the vote for each party. The Democratic party is represented by blue circles and the Republican party by red circles. The map shows a clear pattern of Democratic support in the Northeast, Midwest, and South, and Republican support in the West and Great Plains.
